

The Center for Maghrib Studies in Tunis Presents

Lecture:
Manuscripts on the Move: Ibadī Muslim Networks of People, Places, and Things in North Africa*

Manuscript books, like people, make connections. This presentation will offer the example of Ibadī Muslim manuscripts in North Africa and the Mediterranean as a way of demonstrating the connections between people and people, people and places, and people and their books from the medieval period to the present. Together, we will explore how (and why) the tribes of the medieval Sahara, early modern Italian traders, the printing press, and the internet all belong to the same long-term history the construction and maintenance of Ibadī Muslims and their community in the Maghrib. - The lecture will be in English. -

BY MR. PAUL M. LOVE
PhD Candidate in Arabic & Islamic Studies
Department of Near Eastern Studies
University of Michigan (Ann Arbor, USA)

The event will take place at CEMAT, Thursday October 6th, 2015 at 10:00 am

Address: 19 Bis Rue d'Angleterre (à côté du Croissant Rouge) 1000 Tunis
Tel: (+216) 71.326.219